Aussies Capture Enemy Airdrome At Finschhafen

MacArthur Applies Pressure on Japs

By BOB EUNSON
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Saturday, Sept. 25 (AP)—The airdrome at Finschhafen, New Guinea, has been captured by Australian veterans of desert warfare who now are within three quarters of a mile of investing the Japanese coastal base itself, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today.

The Australians, who overran the third air base to fall into MacArthur's hands since Sept. 11—the Salamaua airdrome was seized on that date, Lae five days later—now are exchanging fire with the Japanese across the Bumi river just north of Finschhafen.

Hold Strong Beachhead
These Aussies landed Wednesday under warship and bomber cover six miles north of their objective and headquarters disclosed today that they coolly ran into Japanese mortar and machinegun fire. A half hour later they had wiped out the opposition and held a strong beachhead.

Then they moved steadily south and put Finschhafen under artillery fire.

While pressure was being increased on Finschhafen's garrison, Mitchell medium bombers flew low in a sector some seventy miles to the west to hammer the rear door of the Markham valley where enemy remnants may be trying to retreat after the fall of Lae and Salamaua.

Many tons of bombs and 41,000 rounds of ammunition were fired in enemy villages, exploded ammunition dumps and silenced anti-aircraft positions. Much of this damage occurred in the vicinity of Ragitsuma, about eighty miles northwest of Lae.

Encountering no enemy fighter opposition, all the Mitchells returned.

Other air activity was on a greatly reduced scale.

Patrolling Catalinas attacked a Japanese destroyer in the Bismarck Sea in the New Britain vicinity Sept. 23 and cargo vessels south of Cape St. George, New Ireland. Results were not given.

On Kimbe bay, midway along the north shore of New Britain toward the enemy stronghold of Rabaul, Beauforts fired supply dumps and exploded ammunition at the Cape Hoskins airdrome.

The tiny island of Gasmatia, off New Britain's South coast, was divebombed by P-40s.

Third Base Menaced
General MacArthur's forces on the Huon peninsula now are on the verge of capturing their third New Guinea coastal base this month by using the simple rule of checkers that a king can jump a man from any direction.

Salamaua and Lae fell last week after the Allies jumped over them with paratroopers and around them with amphibious forces and then attacked from the front instead of the rear.

Now Finschhafen, sixty miles above Lae, is within the grasp of Australians.

Each time the Japanese have been caught by surprise, just as they were in the Aleutians when Kiska was by-passed and cut off by the capture of Attu and the Solomon Islands when Kolombangara island was isolated by the occupation of Vella Lavella to the north.

First details of the Australian amphibious landing were announced in the Friday communiqué of General MacArthur.

Await Stalin's Views:

Strong Move Developing To Delay Postwar Planning Pending Parley

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24 (AP)—With the backing of Chairman Connally (D-Tex.), a strong move developed within the Senate Foreign Relations committee today to delay action on pending declarations of postwar foreign policy until the views of America's chief Allies have been sounded out.

Without mentioning either the forthcoming tripartite meeting of Allied foreign ministers or the possibility that President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin may get together before the end of the year, Connally declared the committee has no desire at this time to "afford an opportunity for interperate and troublesome debate on the floor of the Senate."

Opposes Debate Now
"I'll-considered debate," he said in a statement, "might produce irritations or vexations at a critical period in the prosecution of the war."

"It is known to all well-informed men that the utmost freedom of debate is permitted under the Senate rules," Connally said. "It is further known that senators do not hesitate to avail themselves of that unlimited freedom."

Connally's view that the committee ought to proceed cautiously, despite the overwhelming approval given by the House to the Fulbright resolution tion was shared by Senator George (D-Ga.), who preceded Connally in the chairmanship.

In addition, Senator Thomas (D-Utah), a staunch administration supporter, said that if the committee is to draw a more detailed statement of foreign policy than that expressed in the Fulbright proposal, it ought to await developments at the Moscow conference of foreign ministers.

Resolution Doomed
The Fulbright resolution would put Congress on record as favoring American participation, by constitutional processes, in "appropriate international machinery" to preserve the peace. It has been marked for a pigeonhole in the Senate committee, which expects to bring out its own version.

Connally's reluctance to act at this time found support in the stand of Senator Nye (R-ND), who told reporters he did not believe any statement of American intentions ought to be made until after Britain and Russia have made their postwar aims clearer. Senator La Follette (Prog-Wis) also has argued against consideration of any declaration now.

On the other side, Senator Gillette (D-Iowa) has said that he believes it extremely important for Congress to act, so that the view of the Senate might be known before the Moscow meeting.

14 Men Killed In Pennsylvania Mine Explosion

Others Trapped Far Underground

MINERSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 24 (AP)—Fourteen men were killed when an explosion ripped through the fifth level of the Moffett Schrader at nearby Forrestville today.

Rescue workers working feverishly to reach miners trapped by a blast this afternoon brought four bodies to the surface at 10 p. m. and reported ten other bodies were still underground.

Seven of the ten were identified, while three other bodies, literally torn to bits by force of the explosion were not identified.

Nine in Hospital
Removed to Pottsville hospital were nine workmen, including at least three reported to be in serious condition.

Harry Price, Pottsville, in charge of three rescue crews working in two hour shifts to recover the bodies, said mine motors, tracks and working places had been ripped asunder. The fifth level of the anthracite pit is some 1,500 feet underground.

Price said the four bodies brought from the mine had been identified as follows:

Four Bodies Recovered
Robert Thompson, Minersville. August Felty, Pottsville. Steve Keycock, Forrestville. Michael Stariko, Minersville.

The men known to be dead in the blasted workings:

George Bobrick, Michael Liptok, John Dando, Arthur Miller, Robert Edwards, Albert Levechouskas and Joseph DiBiase all of Minersville. There was no indication as to cause of the blast.

While rescue crews continued their search for victims, weeping wives and mothers huddled near the mine shaft.

Gen. Montgomery And Clark Confer On Future Plans

By RELMAN MORIN

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY, Sept. 24 (AP)—Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery conferred today with Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark on what the latter afterward described as future plans and the relationship between the British Eighth and the Fifth armies.

The meeting held in Clark's headquarters, lasted more than one hour. Montgomery, dressed in his favorite black beret and a grey sweater, appeared smiling and optimistic. He said he was unable to make any predictions of the future, but declared:

"The Eighth army is moving along very well."

No Christmas at Home
Montgomery said he had waged a correspondent five shillings ($1) against his spending Christmas at home, and added "just where we will spend it I don't know."

In Montgomery's presence as they stood in a dusty field outside the tent, Clark said the Fifth army's proud march alongside the Eighth of Montgomery was going to teach the American force a lot of tricks the Britishers learned fighting the Germans.

As the British general entered his automobile to leave, Clark said:

"Clark Thanks Britain
"Thanks very much for coming over. It's been a big help."

Tax Discussions To Start Oct. 4

Higher Levies May Be Strongly Fought

By FRANCIS M. LEMAY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24 (AP)—Congressional tax machinery was geared today to begin Oct. 4 the hard grind of finding additional billions to finance the war, but some lawmakers were skeptical of the ability of taxpayers to bear an appreciably greater burden.

Chairman Doughton (D-NC), after a two-hour meeting of the House Ways and Means committee, announced plans to open hearings a week from Monday on a new general revenue measure, and said:

"It is extremely important that the revenue bill be passed before the end of this year to avoid retroactive taxation. The hearings will be given over to the problems of raising additional revenue to finance the war."

Want Twelve Billion More
The administration has suggested that $12,000,000,000 be needed, in addition to the $38,000,000,000 now being collected annually.

However, Reps. Knutson (R-Minn.) and Carlson (R-Kans.), both Ways and Means members, expressed doubt that anything like $12,000,000,000 more can be raised without undue hardship.

Knutson said "I am afraid to say that I do not see how we can hope to increase taxes much more," and Carlson agreed, saying "I don't think taxes can be much higher."

What paths the search for new revenue might take remain a mystery, since both the treasury and the tax staff employed by Congress declined to give any official hint. Thus no observer can speculate with any certainty on how the individual taxpayer will be affected.

Tax Revision Next Year
Doughton told newspapermen his tax-framing committee would brush

Roosevelt Names Military Group Will Give Advice On Procurement

Will Give Advice On Procurement

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24 (AP)—President Roosevelt today created a joint production survey committee of four high ranking army-navy officers to advise the joint chiefs of staff on changes in the procurement programs of the armed services "in the light of war development, production progress and changing military strategy."

The president in a formal statement said constant attention is required to insure that "our military programs are kept in step with altered military objectives, and that production programs are changed in accordance with lessons from the battle fields and the assembly lines."

"With critical shortages in materials and manpower," he declared, "we must see that we produce only what we need and that the waste unavoidably present in war, is kept to a minimum."

The four-man committee will be composed of two army and two navy officers, to be named by the joint chiefs of staff.

Nelson Provides Tip for Germany

Production Rise Given as Warning

LONDON, Sept. 24 (AP)—Donald M. Nelson, War Production Board chairman, told the British tonight that American war production this year would be at least one and a half times the combined output of Germany and Japan and next year probably would be twice as great.

Speaking at the dinner given by the British government in his honor, the American production chief said he thought his figures might interest the Germans as well as his audience.

He said the United States alone produced 110,000 military planes since Jan. 1, 1942, "and the production curve is still rising."

"Very soon we will be turning out a completed plane every five minutes around the clock, every day of the month."

Also since Jan. 1, 1942, Nelson said America produced 60,000 tanks and tank chassis, 53,000 scout cars and carriers and 1,100,000 trucks and trailers.

"More than 21,000,000 deadweight tons of merchant vessels and nearly 2,000,000 displacement tons of naval vessels have come from our shipyards during this time," he said.

Critical Battle Gels under Way On Long Front

Reds Approaching Smolensk and Kiev

By JAMES M. LONG

LONDON, Saturday, Sept. 25 (AP)—The battle for the Dnieper river defense line began today as the Russians surged forward in force along a 300-mile front on the Eastern bank and knocked at the gates of Smolensk in the north and Kiev in the south, Moscow announced.

German reports said the Russians had tried to cross the Dnieper only one mile above Kiev where the Desna joins the Dnieper but the Soviet communiqué made no mention of a crossing, nor any attempt to cross.

Dnieper Not Crossed
The Soviet monitor, incorrectly transcribing a Moscow broadcast of the communiqué, first said the Dnieper had been crossed in the Gomel sector but later changed its version of the communiqué to tell of a crossing of the Iput river, some seventy miles east of the Dnieper.

Nevertheless, the Russians, according to Moscow reports, were already at the river in many places and the Germans themselves mentioned an attempted Soviet crossing below Gomel at a point where the Pripiet river enters the Dnieper.

In the fighting for Smolensk the Soviets announced the capture of formerly seven miles northeast of Hitler's former headquarters and on the northwest they tightened another tentacle that may soon throttle that big rail center prize. The Rostov-Smolensk high road also was seized.

Kiev, capital of the Ukraine, heard the thunder of approaching Soviet guns at Borispol, seventeen miles to the southeast. The Russians had already swept through Lyski, eighteen miles northeast.

Nazi Losses Heavy
The Moscow communiqué said that in the Kiev battle the Germans launched several counterattacks "but after losing over 400 officers and men killed were forced to roll back."

The communiqué also told of retreating Germans in many sectors, retreating so rapidly they were abandoning artillery, infantry, armaments and munitions. The enemy "is compelled to abandon one position after another. A Soviet formation pursuing the Germans advanced nine miles. Breaking down enemy resistance our troops successfully forced ahead. As they retreat the Germans abandon artillery," the communiqué said.

Attack Fleeing Nazis
A Moscow radio commentator, recorded by Reuters, said the "roads leading to the west are jammed with German transport columns, offering excellent targets to the Soviet airforce which is holding enemy

Marshall Failed As Organ Pumper

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 24 (AP)—Gen. George C. Marshall may be one of the world's military greats, but he admits he was a failure at a boyhood job.

In a letter to the Rev. Bernard C. Newman, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Marshall recalled he was relieved of pumping the church organ "for failing to provide air at a crucial moment, having become deeply engaged in a Nick Carter novel."

Marshall's note accompanied an autographed portrait which Mr. Newman had requested. The portrait now hangs in the Parish House, Marshall, a native of Uniontown, was baptized in the church June 5, 1881, and was confirmed there Feb. 7, 1896.

Murray Asks Congress To Increase Family Allowance for Servicemen

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24 (AP)—President Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO) asked Congress today to boost to $120 a month the family allowance for a serviceman with a wife and two children.

The figure—far higher than any proposed in Congress—would "assure tolerable living conditions for the families of our men now taking the offensive," Murray wrote House leaders.

The present family allowance is $50 for the first child and $10 for additional children. Murray wants $55 for a wife, $35 for the first child and $30 for each of others.

A Senate-passed bill to raise the allowance for a wife and two children to $79 a month by allowing $28 for the first child and $11 for others is pending in the House Military committee but immediate action is unlikely. That bill would increase the present allowance about ten per cent but some House members object to any kind of a flat increase, contending it would be inequitable.

The highest increase yet proposed in Congress was fifteen per cent, and it got scant attention.

The House Ways and Means committee will open hearing Oct. 4 in its search for the additional $12,000,000,000 revenue the treasury says will be needed for the war-time government. Present revenue is about $38,000,000,000. Members weren't too optimistic about finding the entire amount, but they predicted

Non-Fathers in Government Service Face Draft under New Senate Bill

By ERNEST B. VACCARO

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24 (AP)—Senator Bailey (D-NC) is drafting a bill aimed at stripping the federal payroll of able-bodied non-fathers of draft age and steering them into the armed forces.

The veteran North Carolina legislator said tonight that his proposal would be offered next week as a substitute for the Wheeler bill to postpone induction of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers until January 1.

Vote Set for Tuesday
This bill, by Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.), has been scheduled for a vote Tuesday. Administration leaders are confident of sufficient votes to send it back to the Military committee.

While details of his substitute are yet to be worked out, Bailey said it would forbid deferments on occupational grounds of bachelors and married men without children in the government, and cancel deferments now in effect except in cases where superior officers can offer "proof of indispensability."

"Provisions also will be included to force the transfer to combat service of uniformed men down at the War department capable of bearing arms and whose services in their present desk jobs are not absolutely indispensable," Bailey declared.

May Offer Own Plan
Earlier, Chairman May (D-Ky.) of the House Military committee disclosed the abandonment of efforts in the House to forbid the drafting of fathers. He came out instead for a plan to cushion the impact

New Submachine Gun Army's Best

Will Replace Most Others, Harris Says

ABERDEEN, Md., Sept. 24 (AP)—The M-3 submachine gun, known as the "brief case howitzer" has been adopted as the standard sub-gun of the army and will gradually replace other guns of that type, the Aberdeen proving ground announced today.

Maj. Gen. Charles T. Harris, Jr., commanding general of the proving ground said that the "pile-driving midget" in the army's arsenal fires 450 bullets a minute and costs less than $20 to construct. He asserted that it is more accurate, easier to control, has less recoil and a slower but more effective speed.

"The M-3 is not only popular with all our combat teams," Gen. Harris added, "but is superior in all respects to every comparable foreign weapon."

Parachute and amphibious troops are using the gun particularly because of its lightness and resistance to rain and sea water corrosion.

The M-3 weighs three pounds less than a "Tommy" gun and a trained soldier can fire it easily from the ships or shoulder, the Aberdeen

Marshall's Assignment To Slick, Army and Navy Register Asserts

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24 (AP)—The Army and Navy Register says protests from Congress and other quarters will have no effect on the assignment of General George C. Marshall as commander of the Anglo-American forces in the field.

In an editorial for its issue appearing tomorrow, the authoritative but unofficial weekly service paper declares that Marshall's role already has been communicated to Congress, it adds, and many of them probably will become known only as they are disclosed by the development of military offensives.

High Praise for General
Termining the assignment, which was disclosed Tuesday by Kyrle L. Simpson of the Associated Press, "the greatest compliment that could be bestowed upon any soldier, up to this time, in any period of war," the Register adds that it shows President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill are in full agreement that Marshall is the best qualified officer available to put into effect the grand strategy developed during conferences at Casablanca, Quebec and Washington.

Last week the Army and Navy Journal, likewise an unofficial but authoritative publication, said that "powerful interests," whom it did not identify, would like to eliminate Marshall from the Washington scene. At that time speculation centered mainly on an assignment for Marshall to direct a European invasion from England, and the

You're in This War Too . . . The Bonds You Buy Prove It

CHAPTER TWENTY

BILL WASN'T the only person who would like to have seen Adam North cast opposite someone other than Susan. Jack Vinton felt the same way about it—only he wouldn't have wanted him cast opposite Ruth Moorehouse. His idea of perfect casting would be Brenda in Susan's role, and Adam North cast just as he was now—in the masculine lead. It would have been an ideal arrangement, he thought.

Once Adam started rehearsing those love scenes with Brenda Leigh, he would realize how pleasant it was to kiss her, hold her in his arms, and probably out of the play would come a real romance. Then he could stop worrying about Ruth and Adam, could get rid of those gnawing little worries that had to do with the possibility of Ruth eventually becoming Adam's wife—maybe after he had gone off to war, and Adam was left behind to see Ruth day in and day out.

Ruth was sweet and appealing, and Adam couldn't go on forever being blind to that fact. Besides, Ruth was making herself indispensable to him, was learning the factory business from A to Z. Maybe Adam would end up marrying her because he couldn't get along without her. "Then where will I be?" Jack mused unhappily.

He was thinking along those lines that evening as he took Ruth home after the rehearsal.

"Why so silent?" Ruth asked suddenly.

"Thinking," said Jack. "And don't you have any doubts about my having a lot to think about?"

"I haven't," said Ruth gently, as she laid her hand on Jack's where it held the wheel of his car. "What with things as they are at the factory, and your being called any day."

"That's not all," said Jack. "What else?"

"You—and Adam—and me."

"Oh!" said Ruth.

"Why so silent?" said Jack, when they had driven some distance without speaking.

"Thinking," answered Ruth. "And you're not the only one who has a lot to think about." She slumped down in her seat. "Of all the silly casting ideas, Mrs. Platt's certainly got them. She might as well throw Adam at Susan Potter and be done with it."

"Umhum," said Jack. "And maybe I don't live right. Anyway, my prayers go unanswered."

"What prayers?"

"Those about Adam and Brenda. If prayer were answered properly Brenda would have been given the role Susan Potter has, and then—"

"Don't be silly, Brenda goes in for writing and directing, not acting."

"Just the same," said Jack. "She's the girl Adam ought to be rehearsing love scenes with, and not Susan." He shook his head slowly.

"Only I must admit he takes to the part like a duck to water. Heaven knows what'll happen when he really gets down to business—and rehearse without holding our pats in one hand. I only wish you and I had some scenes like those Adam and Susan have."

"We couldn't, being cast as brother and sister."

"That's what I mean. I wish we weren't cast in parts like those." Jack steered the car off the wide street they were traversing and turned into one that was little more than a lane. "We scrap enough in real life without having to do it as brother and sister on the stage."

"Where're you going?" Ruth asked.

"Just taking you for a little extra ride," he replied. "You know, the longest way around being the shortest way home, or however it goes."

Ruth said nothing for a moment.

"Jack," he began, when the car was rolling along a country road. "I've been doing a lot of thinking here of late."

"Who hasn't?"

"I mean about us—and the war. It's no time to get married—with things as they are. I know perfectly well you'll get around to the subject as soon as you can get me out to your favorite spot for proposing—and I want to forestall you."

"Any time is the time to get married," said Jack. "If two people love each other—and were meant to be married from the beginning of time."

"I don't think so. And since that scare we had at the factory, I'm sure we ought to wait—that is, if we do marry."

"How long?"

"Until the war is over—and things get back to normal."

"That may be for years."

"I know it."

"Now listen, Ruth, I—"

"No, let me talk, Jack," the girl cut in. "I hate to have you go off—" you know that—but I'd rather you went free of any incumbrances."

"Meaning just what?"

"Meaning a wife."

Jack grinned. "Incumbrance is a new name for a man's wife," he said. Then, seriously, "I'd rather go away knowing you'd promised to love me until death did part—even if it did part us—than to leave you free to forget about me and marry someone else."

"Nobody else wants to marry me."

"Maybe not, but you're getting lovelier every day, and Adam North thinks you're a mighty important cog in the factory machinery, so—"

"That's just it," said Ruth bitterly. "He thinks of me as a machine, not a flesh and blood woman."

"You're not a woman—you're a girl, and a darned sweet one." Jack stopped the car and slipped his arm around Ruth's shoulders. "However, what I meant is that one of these days Adam's apt to look up and say, 'Goah, has this lovely girl been working here with me all the time?' And then he'll ask you to marry him."

"Not Adam," said Ruth. "But about us," she went on. "Ever since that awful note was dropped in the factory yard I've thought about the women and children—and how terrible it would be if—if they were killed or mutilated. And it's just not right, Jack, for people to marry and—and have children. It's no sort of world to bring them into, and you know it."

"Maybe you're right," said Jack. "But what are folks supposed to do—just stop marrying and having families?"

"Maybe," answered Ruth. "Anyway, I don't think any more people should be born into the world until those already in it learn how to manage things better than they have been managing them. One war after another—shooting—bombing—"

She put her hands over her face and shuddered. "What is going to come out of it all, Jack?"

"I don't know, honey," Jack said. "but certainly something worth while. All the old world is going through is bound to result in something good. Lord knows it couldn't result in anything worse. And I reckon things always take a turn for the better sooner or later." He drew Ruth's head down to his shoulder, kissed her cheek. "Don't let it get you down, sweetheart."

He tried to smile and be a bit funny. "One thing you can count on—the war is booked to end pretty soon after I get into it!"

Ruth straightened up. "Give me your handkerchief," she said, and helped herself to the one in Jack's breast pocket. "Thanks," she said as she dried her eyes. "You are a comfort. And I should be comforting you, not you me. After all, it's you who may have to go, not I."

"So what? Staying behind and working in a factory is no cinch."

"But I'd rather be working there than just sitting around home," said Ruth.

"Sure. Nothing like being occupied—since time passes a lot quicker."

Significant Words
Of a Resolution

THE FULBRIGHT RESOLUTION adopted by overwhelming majority in the House of Representatives quite coincides with the peace policy advocated by the Republican Postwar Advisory Council at Mackinac Island.

The resolution states that "the Congress hereby expresses itself as favoring the creation of appropriate international machinery with power adequate to establish and maintain a just and lasting peace among the nations of the world and as favoring participation by the United States therein through its constitutional processes."

There are several pregnant words in the resolution. Two of them are "establish" and "maintain" with reference to a lasting peace. They mean not only that a satisfactory peace shall be established but continued, and the Mackinac plank said virtually the same thing in the words "to attain permanent peace," to which were added "with organized justice in a free world," and that in effect is embraced in the words of the House resolution, "appropriate international machinery," which could not be appropriate without some sort of "organized justice."

But the pregnant words are the last four, which were added by committee amendment, "through its constitutional processes." Some may wonder, and, indeed, some House members questioned it as superfluous, how the Congress could act otherwise. But these four words are important. They are important because they give warning to the executive department by the significant vote of 360 to twenty-nine, that the Congress, so far as the House is concerned, will not tolerate any by-passing of its constitutional right to participation nor any cracking of constitutional fibers, which have already been stretched to breaking point on many occasions and against which some safeguard is now timely.

That is to say, there will be no toleration of any attempt to ride rough shod over Congress with so-called "agreements" set down and interpreted and practiced as such when actually they are treaties demanding the approval of the Senate.

Thus, the resolution not only will avoid the mistake of failing to maintain a just peace which was made by the Versailles treaty, but also will serve to prevent any monkeying with decrees or interpretations of a treaty as a mere agreement. Both were needed and it is gratifying that they were included in the Fulbright resolution, which, by the way, is not a law, but an expression of policy, which well represents the aspirations of Americans and also gives cheer and encouragement to the peoples who are now joined with this nation in battling for freedom against tyranny.

Balboa and His Discovery

SEPTEMBER 26 will be the anniversary of an important event in the life of a man indirectly responsible for Pearl Harbor, and directly responsible for having the current conflict a global one. The man was Vasco Nunez de Balboa and the most important event in his life was his discovery, in 1531, of the Pacific ocean.

Of course, Balboa did not know he had discovered the Pacific ocean. The appellation, Pacific, an ill-fitting name for that ocean in these days, was conferred upon it by Magellan, who, in 1521, sailed across it to the Philippines, a land now under Japanese misrule.

Unfortunately for Balboa, he had to depend upon historians for publicity, whereas Cortez, wholly devoid of ocean-finding talent, had the fortune to have a poet for a press agent. There may be a moral in this for people who hope to attain posthumous glory for something they didn't do.

The point is to make arrangements now to have some future Keats freeze your name into an immortal poem.

The Swiss Are Now
In a Ticklish Spot

WITH Germany apparently committed to a last-ditch defense of Northern Italy, here are growing indications that the territorial integrity of neutral Switzerland is in danger.

There are rumors—denied, however, by Swiss authorities—that Germany has emanded transit privileges through Switzerland for German troops bound for Italy. There is no doubt about the fact that the Swiss have fully mobilized their border guards and are exercising the utmost vigilance for the preservation of their freedom and independence.

The Swiss have maintained the strictest neutrality in the war. They are entirely surrounded by Germany and German-occupied territory. The unfortunate part of their position is that their transportation facilities could be of great use to Germany.

The Swiss will fight, and fight furiously, to defend their country against invasion, but it is doubtful if the efficient but small Swiss army could long withstand a full-force assault by the Nazis.

If such an assault should come, there is little at the moment that the Allies could do about it. It would be just the sweeping away of another little country in the name of military expediency. There is no use in saying that it would be a blot on Germany's escutcheon, because that escutcheon is so covered with blots that it is practically unrecognizable.

Thrift Is Coming Into Its Own

IT APPEARS that Americans are doing a good job of hanging to their war bonds, and this despite the withholding tax. Sales and redemption figures from the Treasury's daily statement tend to contradict those who spread the false notion about the high percentage of bond redemptions among workers in the war industries. For the first eight months of this year, for instance, approximately ninety per cent of the money that was invested in war bonds has stayed there.

That is a good record. It is even astonishing in the face of what happened in Canada where redemptions of war savings certificates jumped to nearly fifty per cent after a withholding tax went into effect.

In the main, then, Americans—war workers and everyone else—seem determined to save in bonds the money for the things they want after the war, a car, a refrigerator, a home, or perhaps, an airplane. This is good, indeed, because it shows they are coming to appreciate the value of thrift despite the fact that it has been discouraged in quarters where it should be upheld and promoted.

Some Timely Suggestions
For Victory Gardeners

VICTORY GARDENS do not constitute a one-shot program. The demand for food during 1944 will be even greater than it was this year. Thus officials who are concerned with the country's food supplies are beginning to urge that now is the time to start planning next year's garden.

Thousands of persons who lacked garden experience made some mistakes this year. They are in a position to profit from their errors and, as the military experts say, consolidate their position. Until freezing weather, 1943 gardens will continue to produce, although most crops have already been harvested. Decaying vegetable matter should not be spaded under for its soil-improving value.

By the time freezing temperatures come, gardens should be cleared of everything except the root crops that can stand the cold, the ground should be prepared for its season of rest and recuperation, and when outdoor work is not possible, gardeners may sit by the fire and think about what they will do another year.

Virtually all who enjoyed fresh vegetables, grown by their own efforts this year, will be eager to do even more toward aiding the nation's food program for 1944. And the sooner the task is started the easier its completion will be.

The splendid progress being made by Gen. Douglas MacArthur in his drive to return to the Philippines holds the promise of defeat of the Jap long before 1949 unless the general is sabotaged on the home front.

A Salt Lake City group advocates a ban on kissing until the end of the war. Do they want to make the duration unendurable?

Just about the time the New Deal bureaucrats were feeling themselves to be on firmer ground, Congress had to return.

Lift!

By MARSHALL MASLIN

There's something called Lift in this world... and though man can put his finger full upon it, every man knows Lift when he sees it.

The astronomer cannot find it with his mighty telescope. The scientist cannot make a culture of it or stain it or see it under his microscope. But anyone of us can feel that thing called Lift and all of us know that Lift is monotonous and dull.

It's in that smooth rush of blood through the arteries on a bright clear morning. It's the crispness of flowers. It's in the sparkle of water, the shine of a fine coat's collar, the ripple of muscles beneath a fit athlete's skin, the burst of snort from a meadow lark's throat. It is "farin' to go" and much more than that.

You go to the theater and see an earnest play or a light-hearted musical comedy. The learned critic says: "You have seen a masterpiece!" But if it does not catch you by the throat—if it does not lift you high above yourself—pass on, my lad, and forget those words of praise. For that play will be forgotten.

Where there is no Lift, there is no real life. Where there is no Lift, the pulse beats sluggishly.

Where there is no Lift, you are wasting your time.

Lift is in all things good, in the great hills, on the desert, in the quiet people, in the stormy genius. Sometimes it thunders, sometimes it sings a quiet tune, sometimes it is in a garden, sometimes in a battle; wherever life is boldest and bravest and threaded with meaning as gold threads the quartz—there you find Lift and know it when you find it.

You may see it in the gutter, may raise your eyes and find it on a high hill. If you miss it your life is tragedy, but if you find Lift somewhere along the road—just once or twice, even—then life is for you a triumph.

New Legislation
For Marshall Is Seen As Likely

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—It may be necessary to get new legislation from Congress to enable Gen. Marshall to exercise the functions of the chief of staff and also those of operational commander in Europe.

A few days ago in these dispatches reference was made to the set-up during World War I wherein Gen. Peyton March, chief of staff, was told by Gen. Pershing what he wanted and where he wanted it. Although, technically speaking, the orders came only from the office of chief of staff, the commander-in-chief of our forces overseas was, in effect, the supreme commander of our military operations, and Secretary of War Baker in his memoirs revealed that Gen. Pershing's requests or recommendations were fulfilled almost without exception.

Gen. March, who lives in Washington, says he did not take "orders" from Gen. Pershing and writes this correspondent as follows:

"As chief of staff of the army in the First World War my authority was defined by act of Congress, approved May 12, 1917, and general order 80, War department 1918, issued with the personal approval of Secretary of War Baker. This order follows:

Immediate Adviser

"The chief of the general staff is the immediate adviser of the secretary of war on all matters relating to the military establishment, and is charged by the secretary of war with the planning, development and execution of the army program. The chief of staff by law (act of May 12, 1917, takes rank and precedence over all officers of the army, and by virtue of that position and by authority of and in the name of the secretary of war, he issues such orders as will insure that the policies of the War department are harmoniously executed by the several corps, bureaus and other agencies of the military establishment, and that the army program is carried out speedily and efficiently."

"My precedence in rank over all officers of the army continued in effect during the remainder of the war and no attempt was made by Gen. Pershing or anyone else in the army to give the chief of staff back in Washington 'orders'."

The question, of course, is a technical one. Gen. Pershing and Gen. March co-operated, and the strategy of the war was conducted overseas in conjunction with Marshal Foch and the Supreme War Council so that the job of the chief of staff was for the most part identified with problems of supply, both of material and man power and transportation.

Strategy with Marshall

In this war Gen. Marshall, as chief of staff, has thus far had a direct hand in making the strategy. The United States chiefs of staff have really made the war plans and submitted them to President Roosevelt for approval, and when the plans concerned our allies the strategy has been submitted to the combined chiefs of staffs for approval.

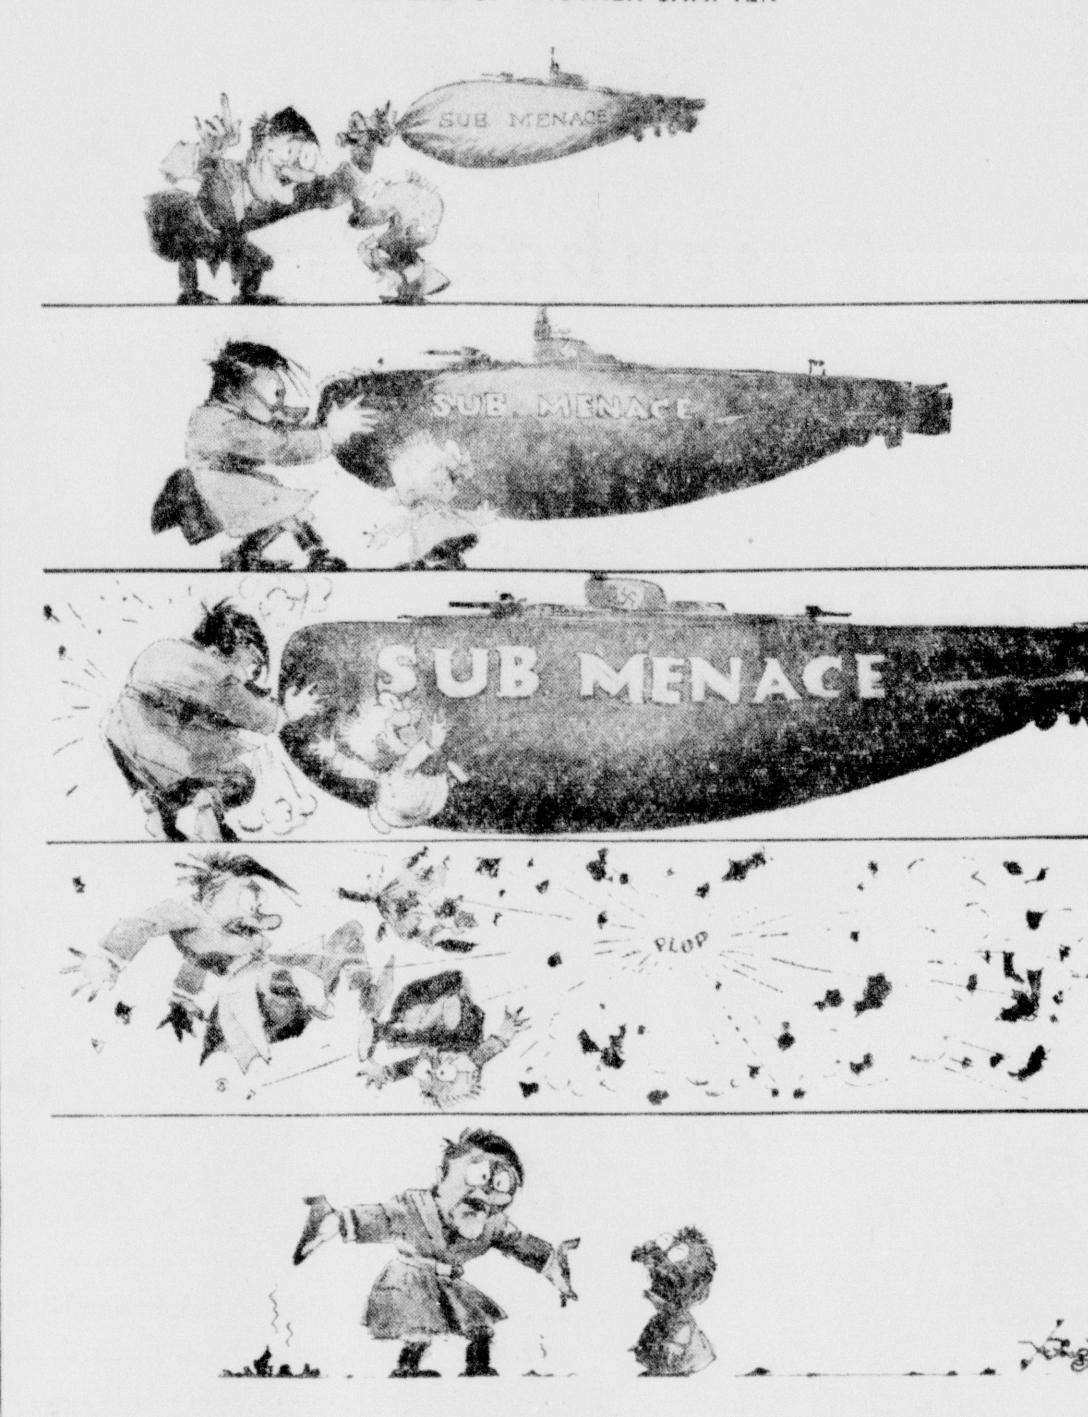

If Gen. Marshall goes abroad as an operational commander of all Anglo-American forces, he could still function as chief of staff, but he would have to delegate much of the work back home to his deputy chief of staff, Gen. McNarney. There is nothing in the law or the orders of the War department which state that the chief of staff must be located in Washington or any other particular place. A deputy chief of staff for the army could sit on the joint United States chiefs of staff and on the combined chiefs of staff and function in accordance with the statutes.

If, however, some new organizational functional position is desired, the Congress would have to pass new legislation, and it may be that President Roosevelt has such plan in mind in order to take care of this special situation.

Situation Unprecedented

The present war involves an unprecedented arrangement of commands, as, for instance, where an army commander gives orders to the navy is certain theaters of war and where a naval officer commands the army in particular operations. Strictly speaking and according to technical tradition, the army can't order the navy around or vice versa, but the commander-in-chief of the army and navy, namely the president, can by directive instruct officers of one service to order certain things done and officers of another service to obey such orders.

It is doubtful, however, whether the functions of the office of chief of staff—since the office is created by statute—can be altered by executive order. So the answer may be either to continue Gen. Marshall as chief of staff and delegate to his deputy the administration of the office, or for the president to seek special legislation covering the situation.

Planned
Deception

From the Manufacturers' Record

The pattern into which our government is trying to fit our American social and economic life is now becoming clear to all intelligent people.

The blundering behind which the real governmental planners hide, and find scapegoats when necessary, is now being recognized for what it really is.

The mistakes charged to Washington are not all mistakes. No group of men could be so dumb as critics believe are those who compose the New Deal. Not at all. There is a plan and a pattern for carrying it out. These planners hide behind the smoke screen of blunders to shield a deliberate attempt to transform our individual freedom into a collectivist society, taking its motivation, and in time even its thinking from a centralized control.

This is not a pretty picture for Americans. This is not what we have asked our boys to fight for. This is not what we, as self-respecting men and women, spent the years of our lives for, so that we could pass on a real heritage to our children.

The little business man who works at his own business just realize now that he has been and is being deceived by government in order that government, through its subsidies and financing of large industrial enterprise, and through its control or supposed control of labor leaders appointed to fat government jobs, can perpetuate itself and its control over all the rest of us. The same thing applies to the farmer and every other self-supporting man.

Such a future for America is unthinkable.

X X X X X
The American way of life has proved itself to be the right way of life for Americans. Let us make it our individual business to see that the American way is preserved.

Advantage for Stalin

When the meeting takes place, Mr. Stalin will have one immense advantage over Mr. Roosevelt and Mrs. Churchill. Mr. Stalin will be able to say what he likes—and what he says will stick. He is the supreme and practically unqualified head of the Russian government, the dictator if you like. He makes Russian foreign policy, and no one questions him. He will not need to look over his shoulder to make sure he is supported by Russian public opinion, for whatever public opinion there is in Russia is what Mr. Stalin wishes it to be. The government of which he is head controls press and radio. Nothing is said or printed that the government does not approve.

When the Russian government wants the Russian people to support a certain position or policy, they drench the country with propaganda to that effect over the radio and in the press. No one dares to go counter to it. A dissenter would be regarded as an enemy of the state and treated accordingly. No opposition party or group is permitted to exist.

In short, Mr. Stalin as premier of Russia, when he meets with Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt, will be able to take positions and stand upon them as completely and confidently as if he were a private individual managing his own business.

Limitation by Criticism

On the other hand, Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill will be under the handicap that limits heads of countries in which there is a free press and a free radio. They will be obliged to guard themselves against taking a position which might be too formidably criticized at home.

This criticism has already begun in America. And the most vociferous part of it takes a strange position. It says, not that Mr. Roosevelt may yield too much to Mr. Stalin, but that he may yield too little. Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and by inference President Roosevelt, are criticized, in spirit attacked, by an allegation that our state department is "anti-Russian." Mr. Hull is obliged to denounce the charge as a "falsehood" and Mr. Roosevelt gives us the harsher word "lie."

Here is a strange thing. Here is criticism, harsh and bitter criticism, uttered in America about the attitude of the American government in its dealings with a foreign government. But the criticism does not seek to strengthen the hand of the American government, it seeks to strengthen the hand of the foreign government. It seeks to intimidate the American president and secretary of state, seeks to make them defer to the head of the foreign government.

Contrasting Freedoms

Between Mr. Stalin, and on the other hand Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill, when they meet, will be clearly defined issues. Instead of helping Mr. Roosevelt to stand firm, this American criticism seeks to weaken him. In the meeting, Mr. Stalin is to have not only the support of his own country, because he is able to decree that, but also the support of a vociferous section of opinion in America. This opinion, adverse to the American government, is permitted to be uttered in America by reason of our institution of free speech. And it is uttered in behalf of a foreign government which forbids free speech.

This condition will attract more attention as the meeting of the three heads of state approaches, which well informed expectation says will be before the end of the year; and as policies of our government, differing from those of Mr. Stalin, are more generally understood.

Where Meddling
Is Dangerous

From the Morgantown, W. Va., Post

We have to trust somebody sometime—even under the happiest circumstances.

When we are fighting a war for our existence, we have to trust a great many persons nearly all the time.

In the actual conduct of the war, we have to trust our military leaders. There is nobody else to trust. If they don't make the decisions and put them into effect, they won't be made and carried out.

We believe the record shows that our military leadership in this war has been of a high quality. Nothing in the progress of the war proves otherwise.

The question of how many men are needed in the army and navy can only be answered by the military leaders. They know what commitments have been made, how much training is required, and what induction procedures must be followed.

We think it is also fair to assume that our military leaders fully appreciate the necessity of keeping war production and the civilian economy in operation. The armed forces are quite as much dependent upon production as are the civilians at home.

Under all these circumstances, it would be dangerous for Congress to interfere with the war strategy decisions which our military leaders have reached unless Congress has evidence of grave miscalculations or serious injury to the whole country.

Bombers Changed
Into Fighters Are Deadly for Nazis

By CENTRAL PRESS

WASHINGTON—Now the story can be told why American Flying Fortresses and Liberators have been able to maintain such a high batting average against the German Luftwaffe (four and six to 1).

Normally, the big bombers carry thirteen large caliber machine guns, making them the most powerfully-armed planes in the skies.

For a long time after the United States Air Forces began their raids on Germany such armament was sufficient to keep the Nazis at a respectable distance.

But, after paying bloodily for the experience, Nazi flyers discovered a blind spot here and there. They also learned that, in order to carry as many bombs as possible, the heavy bombers were forced to cut down their supply of ammunition.

Thus the four-motored jobs were unable to engage in prolonged dog-fights and the Nazis found it easier picking if they laid in wait for the bombers, winging homeward with much, if not all, of their ammunition already expended.

Those happy hunting days did not last long, however.

Bombers Secretly Changed

On one raid the Nazis tore into a formation of "Forts" only to find the bombers spewing back death from utterly strange places. And, on the way home, the bombers fought off clouds of interceptors with apparently inexhaustible machine guns.

In April, May and June, Flying Fortresses shot down 821 planes against a loss of 183 of our own.

The answer? Very secretly bombers had been sent to modification centers and transformed from the world's fastest big bombers to the world's biggest fighter planes!

Instead of carrying bombs to Europe, they were loaded down with guns and ammunition.

They were indistinguishable from their accompanying bombers, but carried a far deadlier sting.

In the air forces they are now known as "Flying Hedgehogs."

Milk Supply Critical

The war food administration warns housewives and others interested not to look for any improve in the milk supply situation in November—a month of normally low milk production.

Every effort is being made to spur the nation's dairymen to greater production through changes in the feed situation, or in prices, but WFA officials say frankly that the vastly increased consumption may cause every city milk market to have more difficulty in finding as big a supply as last winter.

Expectations are that a milk sales control order will be in effect in most cities in the northeast and along the west coast by Oct. 1.

One way out of the difficulty which is under consideration is reduction of the amount of milk sold in restaurants, hotels and other public establishments.

Tax Aid Is Given

The treasury came generously to the rescue of congressmen who passed the "pay-as-you-go" tax bill and were unable to make out their tentative income tax returns due September 15.

At the behest of bewildered representatives and senators, the Bureau of Internal Revenue assigned three experts, aided by assistants, to the capitol to show the legislators how to make out their returns.

Two of the experts were given offices in the House Office building, where they were swamped with requests for appointments from house members.

The other expert was given an office in the Senate Office building. Furthermore, many members of Congress wired in for appointments before returning to Washington for the reopening of the session.

Glass Jars Reduced

War Production Board officials have reduced the number of glass jars available for such things as insecticides, ammonia, paint and various household items so that there will be enough of the containers to package war-vital foods.

With tin and steel on the critical commodities list and with canned goods going to armed forces abroad for anti-breakage and other reasons, it looks as if civilians will find most processed foods in glass instead of tin for a long time to come.

German Defense On Long Front Gets Hard Blow

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press War Correspondent

The Nazi flight to the Dnieper before the amazing Russian summer offensive is an accomplished fact along most of the 800-mile front from Orsha to the sea—and even that defense line is creaking at critical points.

South of besieged Kiev, Red army guns are already lobbing shells across the wide stream less than fifty miles from Bel Tserkov, the gateway between the Dnieper and the Bug through which the Nazi hordes poured in August, 1941, to overrun the great Dnieper plateau. Through the town runs the main railway south of the Dnieper to the Dnepropetrovsk crossing and the Rostov corner on the Don. It is the main supply and escape route for all German forces in the Dnieper elbow or south of it and in the Crimea.

Southern Wing Threatened

A Russian lunge across the Dnieper to Bel Tserkov would threaten the whole southern wing of the Nazi army with entrapment. It is a fair conclusion that Nazi evacuation of the Crimean peninsula and of the whole Dnieper plateau is already in progress to escape a supreme military disaster.

Northward up the Dnieper, where both the Smolensk bastion and the Vitebsk gateway fortress are tottering under mighty Russian blows, the Nazi situation is no less critical. The Red army surge is promising to unhinge the whole enemy front west of Leningrad to the Baltic and force German evacuation of all Northwestern Russia.

But it is the peril to the middle Dnieper line in the Bel Tserkov region that deserves greater attention because of the effect a fresh Nazi disaster there might have on the situation in the Balkans and upon the European war as a whole. It can hardly be questioned that Russian success in breaching the Dnieper line at that point, compelling a Nazi desperation flight from the Dnieper plateau, would touch-off smoldering anti-Nazi fires in Rumania and Bulgaria. It could leave Rumanians in no doubt that Russian armies soon would again be standing on the Dniester and surging into Bessarabia.

One Nazi Hope Remains

The only Nazi hope of a slow paced withdrawal from the half encircled Dnieper plateau lies in the fall rains. By Moscow account it took herculean labors to get men and guns through the clogging mud above the Dnieper for the capture of Poltava and the march on the vital Kremenchuk crossing below it. It will be weeks before winter cold hardens the ground in the south to offer good traction for war machines.

The Russians have overcome the most formidable obstacle in reaching the left bank of the Dnieper, however. That is the low bank. It is fringed by marshlands. On the Nazi-held high right bank conditions for maneuver are better but the river line itself is a formidable position to take.

Time is of the essence for the Russians if they are to spring the Bel Tserkov trap on the foe but the probabilities are that they are not yet in a position to force the Dnieper front at any critical point. That may give the enemy time to fall back in reasonably good order from the Crimea and the Dnieper plateau.

With that clearly foreshadowed further German retreat in south Russia, nevertheless the Balkan pot is more than apt to boil over as did that in Italy, and it will be the Nazis who get burned when it does.

Farmers To Receive Needed Ammunition

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Sept. 24 (AP)—Priorities for munitions for Maryland farmers to aid them in killing predatory animals and birds have been granted by the war production board.

Joseph H. Blandford, chairman of the Maryland Department of the United States Agriculture War Board said these "military" supplies would include 100,000,000 shotgun shells; 12,000,000 center-fire rifle cartridges; 100,000,000 rim-fire cartridges of 22 caliber and primers for reloading rifle cartridges.

Blandford urged the state's farmers to apply immediately for their individual quotas through their regular trade channels.

Thomas Clatterback To Die in Chair

LEESBURG, Va., Sept. 24 (AP)—Judge J. R. H. Alexander of the Loudoun circuit court declined today to set aside the jury verdict finding Thomas W. Clatterback guilty of the murder of Walter Russell, and sentenced the quarryman to die in the electric chair Dec. 10.

The court overrode defense criticisms of Clatterback's signed confession, which constituted the principal weight of evidence against him at his trial here last week before a jury of Madison county citizens. Maj. R. A. McIntyre, defense attorney, contended that the written confession should have included the question asked Clatterback, as well as his answers.

Marshall's

Journal said this would actually be a reduction in the general's authority.

Exact Role Unknown

The Register's editorial says "the exact nature of the role he is about to assume remains to be divulged." It continues:

"If it is command of all American and British forces, both military and naval, in the world, he will have under him the most stupendous array of forces ever engaged in warfare at one time, numbering in men from 18,000,000 to 20,000,000 on the ground in the air, and on the sea, of all categories.

"It is a job of such responsibilities as to stagger almost anyone, but not General Marshall."

The Register notes that Marshall might retain his title of chief of staff, with the deputy chief, Lieutenant General Joseph T. McNarney, becoming acting chief of staff during his absence, but asserts "that is not considered to be either desirable or workable."

Hopkins Wants Somervell

"General Dwight D. Eisenhower appears, at this time, to be the most likely successor to General Marshall as army chief of staff," the editorial concludes, "but it is understood that Harry Hopkins (presidential adviser) prefers Lieutenant General Brehon B. Somervell, now commander of the army service forces."

"Lieutenant General Lesley J. McNair, commander of the army ground forces, also has been mentioned as thoroughly qualified for the head place in our army, as has also Lieutenant General Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff."

Votes for soldiers occupied other congressional committees. The outcome probably will be a "V-mail" for 1944's elections, to be cast at the battle fronts and counted by secretaries of state back home. Biggest stumbling block is to find a national soldier-ballot form that won't conflict with varying state laws.

the big rubber center at Mont Luc on Sept. 15 and on Hannover Wednesday night, against final stage manufacturing, and finally against morale and administration (combined with industrial objectives), as in the devastation raids on Hamburg.

Combined with the RAF's persistent night intruder operations, the raids on airfields are steadily destroying probably as many planes as one or more Nazi factories could produce.

By inflicting damage and dislocations which it is impossible to remedy except on makeshift basis, these forays are softening up the German air force for the day of invasion.

The raids also are giving Allied fliers valuable practice in knocking out critical targets which, when the invasion gets under way, they will have to abolish for keeps.

Turkey Embargo Still in Effect

The Turkey embargo is still in effect and will be until Uncle Sam selects the 10,000,000 pounds of turkey for shipment overseas to men on the fighting fronts, according to William L. Frazier, area director of the War Food Administration.

If anyone offers you a turkey, regardless of price, until the embargo is lifted, you can be sure you are in contact with the black market.

Don't despise the lowly but versatile "goober." Farmers are expected to produce almost a million and a half tons of peanuts this year.

About 700,000 tons of the new crop will be used for peanut butter, candy, bakery products, and for roasting, frying, and salting. The rest of the crop will be used for seed and oil.

Supplies for edible peanut products will be available in the same quantities as in 1942 and in addition enough peanuts will be made available for increases in peanut butter and oil to meet war requirements.

The prospect of a bumper potato crop prompts WFA officials to advise persons who have facilities for storing to stock up on potatoes later in the fall.

The September 1 forecast of 460,000,000 tons of spuds is considerably more than last year and far above the ten-year average.

R. W. Long Is Held by Police

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 24 (AP)—Less than $3,000,000 in third war loan sales were needed today to drive West Virginia the remaining four percentage points of distance separating the state from its $76,000,000 objective.

Sales officially reported to the Cleveland and Richmond federal reserve banks at the close of business yesterday aggregated $73,178,532.50, or approximately ninety-six per cent of the minimum goal.

Sentenced To Die, Boy Grins at Judge

CELINA, O., Sept. 24 (AP)—Louis Vernon Hand, 17, who said he didn't believe in "crying over spilt milk," stood unabashed today as a judge, so affected that he trembled, sentenced him to die for murdering a six-year-old child.

He even smiled broadly as Common Pleas Judge Raymond Younger set Jan. 14 for his death in the electric chair, and grinned at courtroom spectators as a deputy sheriff led him back to jail.

Hand was convicted last Saturday of beating to death Richard Storer with a hammer because the child teased him for not greasing a farm implement.

The youth, who spent part of his life in a children's home and a reform school after his parents separated when he was a baby, said:

"I did it, and I don't believe in crying over spilt milk. I knew what was coming and I can take whatever they dish out."

In British Everybody But the Baby Works

LONDON, Sept. 24 (AP)—Wartime employment has reached the saturation point in this British family—everybody but the baby is working.

In Commons Malcolm McCord-Quade told how a workingman asked permission to arrive at work at 8 a. m. instead of 7 because he had to dress the baby and take him to his "granny's."

Asked why the mother couldn't tend the baby the man replied she had to get up at 5:30 to go on a 6 o'clock shift.

twenty-one tons of explosives on Finschhafen, fighter planes fired 48,000 rounds of ammunition and United States warships shelled the Japanese beyond the beachhead.

Other American bombers prevented the enemy air force at Cape Gloucester, eighty-five miles north-east on New Britain, from helping the Finschhafen defenders. The New Britain base was kept busy with a four-hour air attack during which seventy-three tons of bombs were dropped and 15,000 rounds of machine gun bullets fired. American warships filled the sky with anti-aircraft fire.

The Japanese lost at least forty, and possibly five more, planes in this engagement. Three Allied fighters were destroyed but the pilot of one was saved. Not one of the Allied warships was damaged and not a single passenger was injured.

American Fifth

east of Salerno to the Adriatic above Bari. Impeded only by demolitions, the Eighth army captured Altamura, forty-two miles northwest of Taranto, and Matera, ten miles south of Altamura. An arm of the Fifth army scooped up the mountain town of Oliveto-Citra, twenty-four miles east of Salerno.

The main body of the Fifth army made slow progress in the mountains north of Salerno, but there was evidence of ground gained within sight of smoking Mt. Vesuvius.

An air force statement said American Mitchell bombers "blocked roads and hit targets just behind the enemy lines near San Severino and Sarno." Sarno is nineteen miles east and slightly south of Naples on the east side of Vesuvius. San Severino is seven miles north of Salerno.

The air force bulletin announced that fighter-bombers had pummeled gun positions west of Avellino, a road junction sixteen miles north of Salerno and twenty-five miles east of Naples.

(This suggested that Clark was hurling his main weight toward Avellino in a wide flanking movement to the east of Naples and Vesuvius. The volcano compresses the main highway from Salerno to Naples into a narrow coastal defile.)

Waterfront Wrecked

The heavy pressure of the Fifth army threatened the roads leading into Naples, second largest Italian port of 925,000. German demolitions have wrecked the waterfront and blocked the docks with the hulks of at least 30 Italian ships. Industrial and rail centers also have been put to the torch.

Clark's men encountered heavy artillery and mortar fire and extensive minefields in their forward drive. They struck at dawn to open a new phase in the battle for Italy after firmly consolidating their hard-won hold on the Salerno sector.

A military spokesman said:

"The enemy obviously intends to hold on as long as possible. Progress is slow north of Salerno, but the fighting is bitter and severe. The enemy has reconstructed his whole line and put strength where it is needed. The Eighth army has been able to advance thirty miles northward because of Gen. Clark's operations."

Reinforcements and supplies were being landed constantly on the Salerno beaches to increase the power of Clark's smash.

The Germans were ensconced in strong mountain positions, but beyond this final range lay the flat plains of Naples on which tanks and self-propelled artillery could maneuver easily.

The conquest of Corsica, the French island just 100 miles south of France itself, was near its end. The escape port of Bastia, to which the survivors of the estimated 12,000-man German force were in flight, was rendered virtually useless by air attacks.

40,000 Employees of Newspapers Serving in U. S. Armed Forces

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (AP)—More than 40,000 employees of United States daily newspapers now are serving in the armed forces, a survey by Editor and Publisher, newspaper trade publication, disclosed today.

The survey showed that 766 daily newspapers had 20,267 in the armed forces, with an additional 1,075 contributed by the three major wire services. The article added that "it is reasonable to assume the remaining 900 dailies have contributed an equal number of men."

Of the total, 132 casualties thus far have been recorded by the publication. In addition, the article said, sixteen war correspondents have been killed in line of duty.

The magazine made the first compilation of newspaper contributions to the armed services a year ago, when it was estimated that dailies had 21,000 men and women in uniform or in government employment.

"In a year this figure has been doubled and some newspapers report they now employ less than thirty per cent of their original staff as of October, 1940 (start of the draft)," the article said.

The publication said two thirds of the men and women went to the army, a fifth to the navy, and about one-thirtieth to the marines.

Mechanical departments, it said, were hardest hit, contributing about one-third of the total. Editorial departments were next, accounting for about a fifth, and advertising and circulation were said to have given one-seventh each. One-fifth, the article said, came from business offices of the newspapers.

The magazine said that the New York Times, with 578 employees in the armed services, was the largest contributor. The Associated Press had 524, the United Press, 386 and the International News Service, 165, the publication stated.

Elevator Strike Reported Broken

NEW YORK, Sept. 24 (AP)—Hugh S. Robertson, executive manager of Rockefeller center, declared tonight that the back of the three-day strike of elevator operators and maintenance workers had been broken and that some of them already had been returned to the payroll.

It was welcome news for some 27,000 men and women who work in the twelve buildings affected.

Robertson said he expected normal service would be resumed by Monday. His statement followed a conference with nearly 100 members of the Association of Building Maintenance Employees of Rockefeller Center, an independent, newly-formed union which called the strike in protest against the discharge of seven charwomen.

Shortage of Tin May Delay Canning

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24 (AP)—Tin is so scarce, the agriculture department said today, that if the war lasts another year or two, civilian supplies of canned fruits and vegetables may have to be cut sharply below present rationed levels.

It would be possible, it said, to maintain consumption of canned foods at the present level for perhaps four more years of war. But it added that it would not be desirable to permit tin stockpiles to deplete to zero so long as no one can be sure just when victory over Japan will come.

Young's Best Seller Playing at Liberty

As in "Hitler's Children", Emmet Lavery is using a piece of inspirational poetry in "Behind the Rising Sun," RKO Radio's picturization of James R. Young's best seller of the same title, at the Liberty.

The poetry is by Toyohiko Kagawa, noted Japanese-Christian educator and social worker. Kagawa was arrested by the Japanese because they feared his teachings would destroy the people's faith in their government. He was exiled to an island in the Inland Sea and then disappeared. It is believed he was executed by the Japs. His case is similar to that of Martin Niemöller, German Christian, who was thrown into a concentration camp by the Nazis and whose ultimate fate is unknown.

Permission to use Kagawa's poem, which is entitled "If Only There Are Stars, I Have My Friends," has been obtained from the American translators. Ironically, if American owners of the copyright could not have been found, the Japanese could have sued for infringement through a neutral country. United States laws protect the rights of the individual, whether friend or foe.

Candy Candido Has 3 Singing Voices

Candy Candido, who has a comedy role in "Something to Sing About," the Grand National musical.

SWAPS MODEL JOB

LOVELY NANCY GIACOBBI, Nyack, N. Y., gave up a career as a fashion model to build hollow steel propellers at a war plant in Caldwell, N. J. She made the change when her brother left his defense job to join the army.

cal starring James Cagney, opening tomorrow at the Embassy theater, is an accomplished musician, and has an unusual comedy equipment. He has three speaking and singing voices, a resonant bass, a middle register and a girlish treble, which he can alternate instantly.

Candy hails from New Orleans, where he won local renown as a musician, singer and entertainer, while attending Easton High School and Tulane University, which he quit in the second year to join a traveling troupe of entertainers. Later he played his bass fiddle for several months with Russ Columbo's orchestra. After this he teamed with Gene Austin and Coco for four and a half years and then went with Ted Fiorita's orchestra as bass player and comic entertainer. He left to accept a good role in "Mama Steps Out," and the many laughs he won in that picture was responsible for his being cast in "Something to Sing About."

Henry Aldrich In Garden Film

Currently playing at the Garden theater is another in the popular Aldrich Family series, "Henry Aldrich Gets Glamour." Jimmy Lydon is starred as Henry, and he is ably supported by Frances Gifford, Diana Lynn and Anne Rooney.

The co-feature at the Garden today is "Pirates of the Desert," an exciting Western starring Tim Holt and Cliff Edwards.

Another chapter of "Don Winslow of the Coast Guard" rounds out the Garden program.

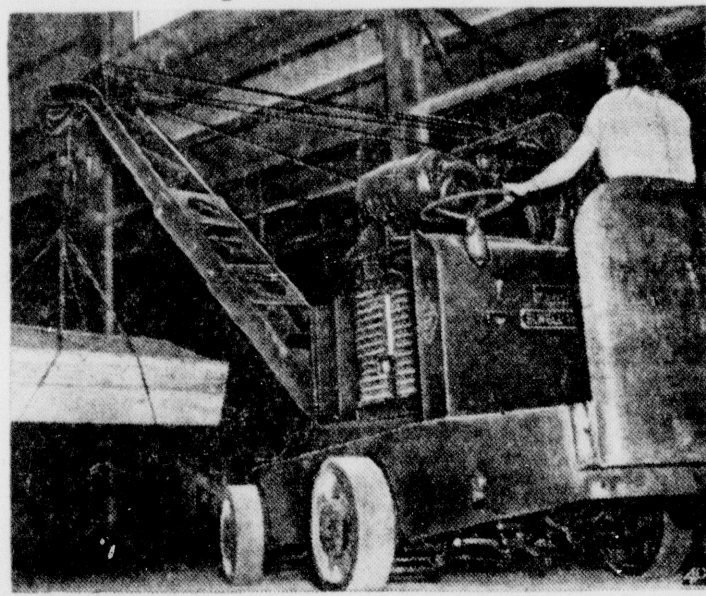

Helen MacInnes' Novel Reaches Screen

"Above Suspicion," the best-selling novel by Helen MacInnes, comes to vivid life on the screen, with Joan Crawford and Fred MacMurray teamed for the first time. The picture is currently appearing at the Maryland theater. It is the adventure of a college professor and his bride who undertake a perilous secret mission in central Europe just prior to the outbreak of war. Their hairbreadth escapes from the Gestapo, involvement in the murder of a Nazi officer and rescue of a British agent among other thrills cram the action.

Richard Thorpe directed the picture with a cast that includes Conrad Veidt, who plays a sympathetic role; Basil Rathbone, seen as a menacing Nazi officer; Reginald Owen, as a British secret agent; Richard Ainley, Felix Bressart and Bruce Lester.

Fruits which drop prematurely are usually afflicted with insect or fungus pests. For this reason, it is wise to gather them up and destroy them rather than leave them on the ground where they may serve as a source of infestation next season.

Beauty Beats Brawn

MANICURED HANDS operate the wheels that control the machines that lift the load.

AP Features

CHARLESTON, S. C.—Pint-sized women are doing man-sized jobs at the Charleston Navy Yard—and they're doing them eight times faster than their husky predecessors.

Beauty has replaced brawn at the yards supply department, thanks to the new lifting machines designed especially for feminine operation. These ingenious devices which have cracked the manpower shortage bottleneck, have helped the shipbuilding and repair yard maintain its record average of one new destroyer a week. And they have meant new jobs for women.

Women operate overhead cranes that lift 25 tons without a squeak, giant cranes whose long booms stretch out 100 feet to snatch up 30 tons at a single bite, and little cranes on rubber-tired wheels that wiggle their booms like inquisitive elephants snouts.

One woman can do more for the war effort in one hour than eight old-fashioned men-hours. And it's all done with machines. The most marvelous new device in the supply department is the fork lift and sit little helper, the pallet. A powered elevating device on wheels, the fork lift can raise heavy loads, 17 feet and carry them almost anywhere.

The pallet is the power behind the work. It provides the space under the articles to be handled so that the prongs can get underneath to lift. Freight cars and trucks come

EAT MORE PEANUTS FOR NUTRITION

PEANUT LOAF: Serve it instead of meat.

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP FOOD EDITOR

Peanuts have won a high ranking place among Foods for Freedom. They are good for workers on the home front as they contain Vitamin B, which helps nerves and digestion, and can be the mainstay of a nourishing loaf used as a meat alternate. They provide hearty elements of a health-building salad, of breakfast rings and muffins. They fortify and add taste attraction to cookies, cakes and puddings.

PEANUT WAFFLES are just right for breakfast and make an interesting last course for dinner or supper. To make six waffles, mix together two cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder, quarter teaspoon salt, two beaten egg yolks, one and a half cups milk, three tablespoons melted shortening and half cup chopped salted peanuts. Beat until smooth and then lightly fold in two beaten egg whites. Pour from a pitcher onto hot griddle and bake until crisp and brown. The waffles are good served in the usual waffle style, with sirup, honey or brown sugar. For breakfast try some covered with creamed, fried or scrambled eggs.

PEANUT DOUGHNUTS are new and popular. Mix together three and a half cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon nutmeg, half cup sugar, half cup chopped salted peanuts, two beaten eggs, one cup milk and two tablespoons melted shortening. Toss the soft dough onto floured board and roll out until thin. Cut out doughnuts and fry until brown in deep hot fat. If unsalted roasted peanuts are used, increase salt to one teaspoon.

PEANUT APPLE BETTY, a wholesome dessert, is brimful of flavor appeal. Mix together two cups cubed bread, two cups sliced apples, half cup shelled roasted peanuts, half cup brown sugar, one tablespoon lemon juice, quarter teaspoon salt, one teaspoon each grated lemon rind and cinnamon, four tablespoons melted margarine or butter and half cup boiling water. Pour into greased baking dish, cover and bake 40 minutes in moderate oven. Uncover and bake ten minutes, to brown. Serve warm or cold, plain or with cream.

For dinner, instead of meat have PEANUT LOAF. To serve four or five mix together one cup chopped roasted peanuts, two cups boiled rice, half cup grated raw carrots, quarter cup each chopped celery and onions, two tablespoons minced parsley, two tablespoons melted shortening and one cup milk. Bake forty-five minutes in moderate oven in greased loaf pan. Serve hot covered with any savory sauce or gravy.

PEANUT SAUCE is something new and nutritious for serving over boiled noodles, rice or macaroni. Make up two cups of well seasoned white sauce, add half cup coarsely chopped salted peanuts, one tablespoon each minced onions, celery and parsley and a speck of cayenne. Simmer five minutes, add a beaten egg and when mixed serve at once. Over-cooking might result in a curdled sauce.

Put some PEANUT BREAD in sandwiches for lunch boxes. Mix together three and a half cups flour, three and a half teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, half cup sugar, two-third cup chopped roasted peanuts, one teaspoon vanilla, one egg beaten, quarter teaspoon nutmeg and one and a half cups milk. Bake an hour in a greased loaf pan in a moderate oven. Reduce salt to half teaspoon if salted peanuts are used.

Barclay on Bridge

By Shepard Barclay
"The Authority on Authorities"

ENCOURAGE A SHIFT
HIGH CARD signals on your partner's leads are valuable when used with discretion. They become boomerangs when given automatically. Some players will always start a high-low when they have a doubt of the suit opened. Others will invariably do likewise if they have an honor in the suit which indicates that the declarer is unlikely to be able to take a trick with high cards in it, due to some honor or honors held by the signaler. But the skilled defensive artist frequently gives a discouraging signal of a small card from such holdings if he sees that a switch of suits appears desirable.

Pass 2♥ Pass 2♠
Pass 4♥ Pass 4♠

West restrained himself from making a diamond overcall, as a proposal to take eight tricks would have been highly dangerous while vulnerable, but he opened the suit, the K. East knew, naturally, that this betokened possession also of the A. Having the Q himself, he realized that the top of the suit was solidly in the grasp of his own side, so signalled with the 8. When West put forth the A, he completed his echo with the 3. Naturally West then led the J.

This made the contract for South. He ruffed that third trick, dropped trumps in four rounds and led the club K, then the 5 to the Q, and finally the J, which West took with the A. A spade came back, but South refused the finesse, going in with the A. Another club furnished a discard of South's last spade, and the final good club was ruffed.

If East had seen the danger of that long club in dummy, as a means of obtaining discards of a spade or spades from South's hand, he should have given a low card on the first diamond, his 3, in order to urge West to shift suits to a spade. If that had been done, the spade K would have been set up for the deciding trick before clubs got established.

Your Week-End Lesson
Why is it usually unwise to make a pre-emptive bid, a suit bid of four or more, on a hand which contains enough honor strength for a normal opening bid of one?

Clean up your Victory garden after everything is harvested, so the space and soil will be cleared for spring plowing and planting.

In Memoriam

In memory of Francis Marion Short, who died one year ago today, September 25, 1942.

One from this world but not forgotten, in the one I love so dear. Though God called him home to stay, his memory lingers here. Your loving smile upon your face, that no one can fill. Well, always love you, Daddy dear, and no one can ever take your place.

Cumberland High Schools To Hold Army-Navy Tests

Examinations Are Scheduled Nov. 9; 213 Took Tests in County in April

The second qualifying test for the army specialized training program and the navy college program V-12 will be given at both Allegany and Port Hill high schools, Tuesday, November 9. It was announced yesterday by the principals of both local schools.

Ralph R. Webster, principal at Allegany, and Victor D. Heisey, Port Hill principal, said that pamphlets of general information which contain an admission-identification form may be obtained at both schools.

This form properly filled out will admit to the test students between the ages of 17 and 21, inclusive, who are recent high school graduates or who will be graduated by March 1, 1944. Intention to take the test should be made known as soon as possible to the principals in order that the necessary test supplies may be ordered.

No Obligation Attached

The same examination will be taken by both army and navy candidates. The examination is designed to test the aptitude and general knowledge required for the program of college training and all qualified students are urged to take the test. At the time of the examination each candidate will be given a choice of service preference, but taking the test does not obligate the candidate to enlist in the service.

According to advance information, the army-navy program enables students to continue academic training at government expense following induction into the armed services. Successful completion of the prescribed courses may, following further officer training, lead to a commission in the army or navy.

Those selected for the army will, after further screening and basic military training, be sent to college. Students chosen for the navy program, after selection by the Office of Naval Officer Procurement, will be detailed directly to college. Students who attend college under either of the programs will be under military discipline on active duty in uniform with pay. All expenses, including tuition, food, housing, books and uniforms will be paid by the army or the navy.

213 Took April Tests
The first of the qualifying tests was held in Allegany county schools on April 2, 1943. Two hundred and fifteen students took the tests in seven schools. Allegany topped the list with seventy followed by Frostburg teachers 38, Port Hill 35, Bruce 30, LaSalle 17, Central 14 and Barton 11.

Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent, said that information on the tests is sent directly to the schools and he assumed that examinations will be conducted at the same schools that participated in the spring.

10,000 Christmas Seals Arrive Here For Overseas Mail

Stamps for Packages to Men in Service Go on Sale Today in City Hall

Holiday packages and mail to be sent to soldiers and sailors overseas may have a complete seasonal appearance—with Christmas Seals.

William J. Edwards, chairman of the annual Christmas Seal Sale for Allegany county, yesterday received 10,000 seals which will be made available to the public for use on Christmas parcels and cards to those in the various branches of the armed services outside the continental United States.

Public Sale Opens Later
"Christmas Seals will not go on public sale until Thanksgiving day, Thursday, November 25, but inasmuch as the post office department has requested all holiday gifts to soldiers and sailors in foreign parts be mailed before September 15 and October 15, we are making available now the colorful and characterful Christmas Seals to add to the Yuletide spirit," Edwards said.

William B. Matthews, managing director of the Maryland Tuberculosis Association, which sponsors the seal sale in Maryland, advises Edwards that parcels and cards to navy personnel overseas may be sent as late as November 1. He also pointed out the fact that letters addressed to prisoners of war and detained or interned citizens are exempt from all postal charges but may carry Christmas seals. Such letters are acceptable even though the regular mail services to the country may be suspended.

Sale Starts Today
Edwards received 300 sheets of stamps yesterday. They may be purchased at the water department office, city hall, starting today. Each sheet of 100 seals is valued at $1.

Local Social Club Named Defendant In $3,000 Suit

The Societa Cristoforo Colombo Social Club was named defendant in a $3,000 damage suit docketed in circuit court yesterday by John W. Reed, of this city, for injuries sustained last December in a fall on the steps leading to the club rooms. His mishap occurred on or about December 25, 1942, while he was leaving the club room about 10:30 p. m. when he asserts, because of the unsafe condition of the steps and the railing he fell and broke his right arm above the elbow.

Reed, who is a painter and paper hanger, charges that because of his injuries he was disabled for a long time and was prevented from doing his usual work. He also alleges that his injury permanently disabled him and lost him his earnings for nine months, besides causing considerable expense in hospital bills and physician's fees.

F. Broke Whiting, attorney, is solicitor for the plaintiff.
